The reason assigned for the reduction is that the farmers are unable to raise grain at the present rates. -Tempe

The principal scenes of Charles H. Hoyt's latest farcical play, "A Black Sheep," are laid at Tombstone. The mine, fifteen miles from Phœnix, was leading character is Hot Stuff, a sort of a combination cowboy and New York dude, and the editor of the Tombstone Inscription is also one of the dramatis personae. The actor who takes this part is said to closely follow the lines of the Arizona Kicker in the policy and management of his minie newspaper. The owners of the Bull Dog mine at The play made an instantaneous hit upon its first presentation.
